

Elf Frank Myrrh: Hello again from the North Pole News Desk, I'm Elf Frank Myrrh of North Pole Radio News. The effort of recent weeks to put more ships, sleighs and reindeer on the task of bringing new materials for Santa's workshop to the North Pole is evidently working. Here with a live report from the Receiving Department is our eye in the sky reporter Elf Crash Murphy. Crash, how are things over there?

Elf Crash: Frank, this has to be one of the busiest places at the North Pole. We're at Port Ebenezer and the shipments are pouring in now around the clock. While the news, as always, seems to be centered on the reindeer and the work they are doing I have to give a shout out to the North Pole Navy which is also bringing in boatloads of new material.

Elf Frank Myrrh: Crash, what's the process of getting that stuff from Port Ebenezer to the Santa's Workshop complex and how do they keep all that stuff straight?

Elf Crash: It's a complicated business for sure, Frank, but Elf Bernard knows what he needs and where it all needs to come into in order for the workshop to function. I told you they other day they were working around the clock and now I can tell you they are bringing in elves from the Sleigh Department and from other departments such as the North Pole Parks and Rec Maintenance Department. These are elves with experience working with tools who can blend in with other workshop elves and get production going even faster. So there's a complex process of speeding up not only the stuff of making toys but also the elves who make them. I'm hearing word of expanding the workshop via remote facilities in the days and weeks ahead, too, Frank. So we're definitely seeing some good news finally come out of this whole thing.

Elf Frank: That's exciting to hear, Crash. Thanks for that positive report. From the North Pole, where we're getting things done, I'm Elf Frank Myrrh reporting for SantaUpdate.com on the Kringle Radio Network.
