

Elf Frank: Hello again from the North Pole news desk, I'm Elf Frank Myrrh of North Pole Radio News. There's good news coming out of Santa's workshop in recent days as they struggle to make up for lost time generated earlier this year due to supply issues. But there's bad news among all the good news and here to explain that is our eye in the sky reporter, Elf Crash Murphy, who joins us today from North Pole Flight Command. Crash, is there bad news to report?

Elf Crash: It's early October, Frank, I don't think we can call anything bad in terms of news right now. But there's some cautionary concern to speak to and I think it's time we speak to it.

Elf Frank: Ok, what's the problem?

Elf Crash: It's not a problem, Frank. It's a challenge. With Santa's workshop now functioning above their usual capacity and making headway with their crisis, a new crisis is emerging in the Wrapping Department. The workshop is working so fast that the Wrapping Department cannot keep up. So they too are working long shifts and bringing in elves from other departments to try to keep up with what the Workshop is doing.

Elf Frank: Where does this end, Crash? Is there another department that is going to be affected by all this hyper production besides Wrapping?

Elf Crash: Oh yes, as the Wrapping Department adjusts it is going to through off the Tagging Department and once they get it in gear the Logistics Department has to find a way to step it up. There's a cascading effect to all of this, Frank, that people not at the North Pole cannot see.

Elf Frank: Ok, Crash, keep us posted on all the big adjustments being made to keep things on track for Santa's launch on Christmas Eve. From the North Pole, where even the News Department is stepping it up, I'm Elf Frank Myrrh reporting for SantaUpdate.com on the Kringle Radio Network.
