

Elf Frank Myrrh: Greetings from the North Pole, I'm Elf Frank Myrrh of North Pole Radio News. A snowy first Saturday of Christmas at the North Pole could not be busier and reporting to us from Kringle Park from the festival of trees is our eye in the sky reporter, Elf Crash Murphy. Crash, is your Christmas tree up yet?

Elf Crash Murphy: Yes, Frank, it's been up for weeks and I've named it Mr. Meatloaf.

Elf Frank: You...what? You named it Mr. Meatloaf? Really?

Elf Crash: Yeah, when I was decorating it I lit a candle I got from a friend that was called Essence of Christmas meatloaf and now I can't get the name or the smell of that candle out of my head.

Elf Frank: No offense, Crash, but that's just about the dumbest name for a Christmas tree I've ever heard in my life.

Elf Crash: What did you name your tree, Frank.

Elf Frank: Uh, Ginger.

Elf Crash: Ginger? Are you kidding me, Frank? I'll stick with Mr. Meatloaf. Anyway, Frank, the festival of trees here in Kringle Park is all about Christmas trees that are sold for charity. Volunteers work for weeks ahead of this weekend to decorate trees that are then sold and the money is used to help people in need at Christmas. It's a tradition here at North Pole Village that people love.

Elf Frank: And I'll bet none of them carry names like Mr. Meatloaf or Ginger. Thanks for that report, Crash. I'm sure we'll touch base later. For North Pole Radio News, where my studio Christmas tree stands tall today, I'm Elf Frank Myrrh reporting for SantaUpdate.com on the Kringle Radio Network.
