

Elf Frank Myrrh: Hello once again from the North Pole News Desk, I'm Elf Frank Myrrh of North Pole Radio News. Stocking mail is being asked about by believers and Santa tracker elves alike these days and with Santa's launch soon upon us its time to get some answers. Joining us today from the North Pole Post Office is the director of Santa Trackers, Elf Crash Murphy. Crash, would you ever endorse the idea of Santa trackers using stocking mail to track Santa for Santa?

Elf Crash Murphy: No, I would not, Frank. Stocking mail was designed for believers to communicate with Santa. That's the transmission of things like wish lists. In other words, simple stuff. A Santa tracker works in a world of weather reports, landing zones, roof and chimney inspections and complex data that's useful to a sleigh pilot at high speeds. There's no way to collide those two worlds, Frank.

Elf Frank: So you're telling tracker elves to stay online, use their devices and work through their Elf Supervisors to communicate with Santa?

Elf Crash: Preach it, brother. That's the gospel of tracking Santa for Santa. There's no way Santa could handle what trackers would have to send him via a stocking. They call it flight command for a reason, Frank. It takes elves of all kinds to track Santa for Santa and we move as a team.

Elf Frank: That being said, do you see anything different for stocking mail being used this year for believers?

Elf Crash: It's the last resort in messaging Santa, Frank. Santa will only authorize the sending of stocking mail when it is completely to his advantage to do so. Stocking mail is what they call an enclosed ecosystem. It is direct to Santa stuff. It doesn't go through the usual processes for contacting Santa. It's straight to him. As such, Santa can't handle it until he needs it. And when he will need it is anyone's guess. So, sometime on Christmas Eve, sometime likely after Santa launches, stocking mail will engage. When Santa tells us. That's the way it has always worked.

Elf Frank: Ok, Crash. So to answer those questions out there any believer can be ready to use stocking mail, but they have to listen to North Pole Radio News to know when it try it.

Elf Crash: That's it. If you believe in Santa, you gotta listen to Santa when it comes to this stuff. He'll let us know when we can use it.

Elf Frank: Simple enough, Crash. Any predictions as to when Santa will engage stocking mail?

Elf Crash: No clue, Frank. It's usually all over the place, sometimes early, sometimes late. There are too many uncontrollable variables at play with its use. So we all need to listen to the news and start using it when Santa says so.

Elf Frank: Great report, Crash, and thanks for laying it out for us about how stocking mail works. From the North Pole News Desk, where our stockings are ready for sending mail or receiving goodies, I'm Elf Frank Myrrh reporting for SantaUpdate.com on the Kringle Radio Network.
