

Elf Frank Myrrh: Hello once again from the North Pole news desk, I'm Elf Frank Myrrh of North Pole Radio News. A big week is before us as we countdown the hours now until Santa's launch. The world will soon be tracking Santa and we have much to hear from the International Director of Santa Trackers this week about the help Santa is going to need on his journey. Joining us once again from Flight Command is Elf Crash Murphy. Crash, is anyone feeling ready for Santa's launch?

Elf Crash Murphy: Absolutely, Frank. With the big exception of Santa's workshop, things are definitely more than ready for Santa. The sleigh is ready, the reindeer are ready, Flight Command is ready and believers around the world are definitely ready.

Elf Frank: Crash, if you don't mind we have a question coming by way of a school teacher in Reno, Nevada, Mrs. Simonsen's 3rd grade class. She says that school is out there this week but tracking Santa next week is still going on. They've been tracking Santa for Santa since school began in August – can her 3rd graders become individual tracker elves so they can continue to track Santa for Santa next week?

Elf Crash: By all means, Frank. We welcome trackers of all ages. It's not too late and we feel like trackers are going to have their hands pretty full as Santa takes to the skies. The more the merrier.

Elf Frank: Good to know that we could get a lot of new trackers onboard as school ends this week. Hopefully everyone will spread the word and join you in North Pole Chat on Sunday for final instructions. And, speaking of trackers, here's Elf Westover with what trackers need to know today.

Elf Westover: Hello and good morning trackers! There is now a week till Santa's launch. Santa will be back in 6 days. Please make sure to send in your check-ins elves when you are requested to do so. This is Elf Westover wishing you a Merry Christmas and remember, stay jolly!

Elf Frank: Thank you Elf Westover for that fine report. From the North Pole, where we love hearing from trackers from all over, I'm Elf Frank Myrrh reporting for SantaUpdate.com on the Kringle Radio Network.
