

Elf on the Shelf Program

Elf Frank Myrrh: Hello again from the North Pole news desk, I'm Elf Frank Myrrh of North Pole Radio News. Elf on the Shelf is getting a lot of attention this year as the North Pole has begun efforts to organize the ranks of millions of visiting elves who enter the homes of believers each year. We started our coverage of this story more than a year ago with an episode of the North Pole Podcast with my co-host, Elf Crash Murphy, who joins us now from his office at North Pole Flight Command. Crash, how is this new Visiting Elf Program at the North Pole being received?

Elf Crash Murphy: It seems pretty positive, Frank. It is only August but we're already seeing good efforts to register some elves. It's my understanding that the efforts to find these elves and get them trained with the Elf Code and the Elf Oath is working out pretty good so far.

Elf Frank: What about the other features being offered of asking about the status of your elf or even locating a lost elf? Are people engaging with those capabilities?

Elf Crash: They are, Frank. It's my understanding that Elf Butch Winky, who is kind of an elf bounty hunter, is already out on the road chasing down some of these guys.

Elf Frank: I wonder what kind of reception he's getting out there. What could those elves who have been independent all these years feel about the North Pole trying to give some structure and direction to that program?

Elf Crash: I've been asking around that same question, Frank, and I've been talking some with Elf Horace Feeney that you talked about on the North Pole Podcast last December, Frank. There's some energy out there about this that's pretty good.

Elf Frank: We should get Elf Horace in for the next episode of the podcast, Crash. I think this is going to be a very big story this year.

Elf Crash: Let's do it, Frank. I'm tired of not having answers all these years for Elf on the Shelf and we're starting to get them now. Things are moving forward.

Elf Frank: Okay, Crash – we'll do just that. Folks, please stay tuned for an all new episode of the North Pole Podcast addressing the situation with Visiting Elves. From the North Pole, where I'd like to get a visiting elf myself, I'm Elf Frank Myrrh reporting for SantaUpdate.com on the Kringle Radio Network.
